MORGENSTERN INJURY LAWYERS

Attorney Michael Morgenstern says, "Toyota. Here we go again."

Morgenstern has fought the auto giant before. A Maryland jury awarded Morgenstern's client $59.8 million for the devastating injuries caused by Toyota's negligence. Toyota had placed profit over safety then, and it's happening again now, says Morgenstern.

Toyota has recalled millions of cars worldwide because of sudden acceleration problems in its vehicles. Toyota was aware of these incidents since 1997, yet it took countless injuries and tragic deaths before the recall was ordered by the company, according to Morgenstern.

Toyota can build a safer car but continues not to—putting profits over safety, says Morgenstern. Toyota must be held accountable and compensate those who have been injured. The only way to do this is to fight them in court and to win, says Morgenstern.

Few lawyers have actually litigated against Toyota and an even smaller number have actually beat Toyota. Morgenstern has done both.

A car crash can change the life of an entire family so it should also change the way a company builds cars, he says.

Washingtonian has repeatedly named Morgenstern as one of the area's top personal injury lawyers. He has been selected every year by Washington D.C. Super Lawyers and Maryland Super Lawyers magazines. Morgenstern, who lives in Bethesda with his wife and two children, helped Bethesda Magazine identify Bethesda's most dangerous intersections for pedestrians in 2007.

Morgenstern has been practicing for 32 years and exclusively represents people injured in car accidents.
